Overview

Access New Zealand is a web-based resource offering local, regional and national perspectives on current issues and events. Featuring comprehensive news coverage from both the North and South Islands, this one-of-a-kind resource features both local publications and nationwide news sources such as The New Zealand Herald, The Dominion Post, The Press and Waikato Times. Access New Zealand includes content from the most popular daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers as well as hard-to-find community and regional news. Patrons can access authoritative, staff-written coverage from sources across New Zealand—including those closest to a specific issue or event—so they can compare and contrast the unique perspectives within each publication.

Complete, full-text content

Access New Zealand includes the full text of all staff-written news articles, as well as additional sections such as literary criticism, people, editorials, book and film reviews, and much more. In fact, with the exception of notices, classifieds, pictures and advertisements, the entire contents of each newspaper are included—providing libraries with an unmatched research tool.

Content unavailable anywhere else

More than 70 of the 118 titles contained in Access New Zealand are unique and unavailable in any other resource. This makes Access New Zealand the most comprehensive and authoritative collection of news sources anywhere.

Current and archived coverage of a wealth of subjects

To help patrons explore issues and events more thoroughly, Access New Zealand includes archived articles as well as daily updates from all news sources. Access to both current and past coverage helps users develop a deeper understanding of important issues while enabling them to track trends and developments over time.

Convenient web-based access

All of the articles within Access New Zealand are fully searchable online through a single, intuitive interface. An interactive map of New Zealand is included, making it easy for patrons to find, select and search a single news source, a group of sources, or all available news sources simultaneously. A full bibliographic citation accompanies the full text of each article so users can find articles by author, date, section and more.
