

Access Australia

Comprehensive news coverage from all states and territories

Quick Facts

The largest collection of Australian news sources

Featuring more than 500 sources from six states and two territories

Includes small community and regional publications as well as news sources published nationwide

Overview

Access Australia is a unique, web-based resource that provides libraries with comprehensive news coverage from all Australian states and territories and beyond. From local publications to nationwide news sources such as The Age and The Australian, Access Australia includes content from the most popular daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers as well as hard-to-find community and regional news. Each news source has its own focus, and patrons can select news closest to the issues and events for authoritative, staff-written coverage. Thus, Access Australia provides local, regional, national and international perspectives on current issues and events.

Complete, full-text content

Access Australia includes the full text of all staff-written news stories, as well as additional sections such as literary criticism, people, editorials, book and film reviews, and much more. In fact, with the exception of notices, classifieds, pictures and advertisements, the content of the entire newspaper is included to provide libraries with a comprehensive information resource.

Current and archived coverage of a wealth of subjects

To help patrons research issues and events more thoroughly, Access Australia includes backfile coverage in addition to new articles and daily updates for all news sources. Current and archived coverage provides information that helps users understand important issues as well as track trends and developments over time.

Convenient web-based access

All of the articles in Access Australia are fully searchable online through a single interface that features a map of Australia, making it easy for patrons to find, select and search a single news source from a specific area, a group of sources across multiple regions, or all news sources in the library's collection simultaneously. Also, a full bibliographic citation accompanies the full text of each article, so users can find articles by author, date, section and more.
